With the Harena project, Enzo Eusebi wants to find a connection between communities and individuals, in a historical moment in which the concept of relationship is being critically and radically reconsidered.
he space is a sequence of rooms housing a restaurant, an academy for professional chefs organised around ultra-technological workstations, an American bar/bistro complete with a "library lounge", and an international wine cellar.

The renovation includes using the old cinema as a large atrium-like space.
Here, the original platforms that once supported the machines have been used as raumplan and points of further and different aggregation.
Enzo Eusebi has also preserved and re-proposed with contemporary materials the existing structures of the building, only inserting a new light steel structure that reinvents the main facade also through new openings for natural ventilation that will reduce the need for artificial cooling.
