Artemide

Restaurant entirely illuminated with custom products made by Artemide.
Noé Duchaufour-Lawrance has designed a soft and profound amber bubble of light on the 56th floor of the Montparnasse Tower, designing all the furniture including the lighting, and asked Artemide to develop the ceiling lights he designed, being aware of the great know-how in terms of custom products.

Direct lighting fixtures for the light is reflected off an internal gold reflector and passes through a honeycomb aluminum diffuser to diffuse a soft and warm light through the mirror Bronze.
For indirect lighting the light is reflected back only to give a luminous halo declining on the ceiling of the restaurant.
